There's No Law Against Compassion...

The Jews knew that the law made an exception on the Sabbath if someone's life was in danger. In Jesus' scenario of a son or ox falling into a well death was not an immediate risk, but the Pharisees knew they would each have pulled him out therefore undermining their own strict reading of the law.

Jesus was showing his hosts there is no law of God forbidding compassion or mercy. In fact, our devotion to God should promote, never prevent, such actions toward those in great need. The real sin was not healing on the Sabbath, but failing to recognize the inherent value of a person burdened by illness.

True religion will never allow the first part of the Great Commandment ("Love the Lord your God with all of your heart...") become an excuse for not obeying the second part ("...and love your neighbor as yourself"). – Pastor Randy
